Both teams made touchdowns, one of Carlisle's coming from a 55-yard run by Welch on a quick shift; while Brown's was made by Ashbaugh after a blocked kick on the 30-yard line.

PENNSYLVANIA DOWNS CORNELL.

Wins Thanksgiving Day Football Game By Wide Margin of 21 to 9.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—Pennsylvania won the Thanksgiving football game from Cornell yesterday afternoon by a score of 21 to 9.

At the end of the first period it looked like a close game, but Pennsylvania showed better staying qualities and generalship.

There were numerous forward passes in which Pennsylvania fared better than Cornell, many end runs of from 20 to 30 yards.

In his confession, Sudman expressed the desire that his children be prohibited from visiting him in prison until they are grown up.

The election was a notable one, as being the first held in any Maine city under a commission form of government. Small majorities were the order of the day but the only change in result made by the recount was in the case of the mayor.

She Had Consumption Was Dying; Now Well

Ekman's Alternative being used with success in the treatment of tuberculosis. Persons who have taken it improved, gained weight, exhausted night sweats stopped, fever diminished and many recovered. If you are interested to know more about it, we will put you in touch with some who are now well. You can investigate and judge for yourself. Read of Mrs. Gertie's recovery: Griffith, Ind. "Gentlemen: Thinking that perhaps a short history of the remarkable cure of my mother-in-law (Mrs. Anna Gertie) might benefit some of your sufferers, I hereby give the following testimonial: About September 10, 1908, she was taken sick with Catarrh of the Throat and continued to grow worse, requiring a trained nurse. Night sweats were so bad that it was necessary to change her clothing once or twice every night; her cough increased and got so bad that everybody expected that she would not live much longer. The trained nurse (Miss Anna Truett) informed me that she had Tuberculosis and nothing could be done but to let her die. When she was taken to St. Michael's Church, at Silverville, Ind., prepared for her death, she recommended that I get some Ekman's Alternative, and see if it would not give her some relief. I then requested the attending physician to give her the Alternative, and he informed me that she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. When I asked if he thought that it was useless to try the Alternative, he replied that 'No physician could help her any and I could not stay near her.' So I immediately sent her a box of Ekman's Alternative, and she began to feel better. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alternative, which she did. At the end of the first week's treatment, she got so good that she refused to take any more of it. But the doctor advised her to keep on taking it, as it was the only thing that might help her. I am glad to say now that she kept on and soon began to improve. Now, she works as hard as ever, weighs twenty pounds heavier than she ever did before she took sick, and is in good health. She frankly says she owes her life and health to Ekman's Alternative. We kept it on hand at all times and recommend it highly." "Signed Affidavit" J. H. CLEVER PLAY BY GODDARD

Basketball Team Defeated Hardwick Academy, 43 to 14

IN BARRE'S OPENING GAME

Seminary Showed Mid-season Form, While Hardwick Was Crude, and the Former Won Up Several Substitutes.

Goddard seminary opened its basketball season in the Church street gymnasium last night before a crowd of perhaps 150 people by defeating Hardwick academy by the score of 43 to 12. In a measure the contest was a preliminary one for both aggregations, but the advantage was always with the seminary. Lined up against the visitors, the local five appeared to have already had the benefits of a season's training, while the work of the Hardwick team, especially in the first half, was rather crude.

In Goddard's line-up were such stars as McLeay, Chappel and Melver, who have figured in many victories for the hill team. Chappel proved to be the most aggressive player of the evening and he was everywhere at all times. McLeay, Craig and Carroll also displayed cleverness whenever an opportunity for good work was offered in a game that was manifestly mediocre. Angell, Cutting and Aldrich formed an understudy group, which may be expected to be of material aid in the games to come. For Hardwick, Bardelli and a diminutive basket shooter named Lameri, who was sent in during the second half, played the most consistent game.

Before three minutes had elapsed in the opening period, Chappel had sent the ball true to its mark for Goddard's first counter. McLeay, Carroll and Melver followed a few moments later and before the period closed, Craig had contributed several baskets to the seminary's collection. The locals were penalized a few times during this half, but in every instance the Hardwick man failed to shoot a foul. Six minutes before the whistle blew, Bardelli came within striking distance of Goddard's basket and made a successful shot for Hardwick's only score of the period. When the whistle sounded the figures were arranged in a 26 to 2 order, with the margin in favor of Goddard.

In the last period, Goddard presented a somewhat altered line-up. With the game already won, Coach Kurtz sent in a few substitutes and posted Chappel at center to replace Carroll. During the second half of this period, Lameri took Gallagher's position at right forward. The Hardwick outfit came back stronger in the closing period, although Goddard's youthful recruits kept the scoring well down. A clever pass, Chappel to Aldrich, was one of the features which brought a basket and during the latter part of the half, Chappel and Craig figured in some long chances that brought baskets.

Hardwick was given the opportunity to shoot three fouls, Bardelli and Lameri accepting two of the chances. With the exception of a well-directed shot by Noble for a basket, Bardelli and Lameri cornered all of Hardwick's tallies. Goddard's points totaled seventeen at the sound of the whistle as against twelve for the invading team.

The game was marked by little roughness and either team was allowed few chances to shoot fouls. The academy team showed a sad lack of ability to follow the ball and this failing was largely responsible for Goddard's heavy scoring. A large delegation of students from the hill was present to urge their representatives on the floor to victory.

The line-up:
Hardwick Aca. Goddard Sem.
Bardelli H. Craig Sem.
Gallagher, R. Melver Sem.
Lameri, R. Angell Sem.
Noble, C. Carroll Sem.
Chappel Sem.
Batchelder, Lg. H. Craig Davis, rg. Rf. Chappel

Baskets from the floor—Chappel 6; Craig 5; McLeay 4; Melver 2; Carroll 2; Angell; Aldrich; Bardelli 2; Lameri 2; Noble. Goals from fouls—Bardelli; Lameri; Chappel. Referee—Marianni. Umpire—Kurtz. Timers—Danforth; Brown. Time—two 20-minute periods.

Sudden Attack of Appendicitis Caused Postponement of Fight.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 1.—On the eve of a fight in which his title to the lightweight championship was at stake, and for which he had brought himself supposedly to a state of physical perfection, "Ad" Wolgast Wednesday night lay in Clara Barton hospital recovering from an operation for appendicitis. His condition was said to be good. His fight with "Freddie" Welsh is off indefinitely.

The illness of Wolgast came suddenly. He retired Tuesday night after partaking of a hearty supper, feeling, he declared, in fine fettle. With Wolgast at the training camp in Vernon, Cal., were his sparring partner, "Hobo" Dougherty, and his manager, "Tom" Jones. The party retired for the night at 9 o'clock promptly.

The winner's time was 33:12.12. Hearne 33:33.07. De Palma 33:40.80. The average speed in yesterday's race was 74.45 miles an hour.

THANKFUL SPIRIT AND WHAT IT MEANS

ferences, we have gathered around the common altar dedicated to the goodness and mercy of God, to sing in our prayers, 'Our Fathers' God, to Thee, Author of liberty, to Thee we sing.' 'There is a reason for thanksgiving not found in the multitude of things we received, but found in ourselves. God does not need our praise so much as we need to give praise. We justly pity the man who knows no gratitude. How poor is he, indeed. We can hardly conceive of a single heavenly treasure stored in his soul. How small is his vision of life, a cloud of darkness shuts him in to himself. No light to his path in life's dark valleys; no power to bear his burden in joy; no abiding place where sorrow has troubled the waters of life.

"How true it is that religion is the measure of a man's life. I do not mean the creed or the ceremony, for these are only the outward expressions of religion, at best only aids to religious exercise. By religion, I mean the ideals—the vision of the full fruition of the divine purpose mirrored upon the soul; I mean the motive—that spirit that sanctifies or curses the deeds of man; I mean the affection—that bond that unites man to God's universe and makes him to know himself a part of the great whole. Religion is the measure of men and of nations. That is why we are called this day to our festival of thanksgiving. It is the same reason that calls the mother to teach the little child to say 'Thanks,' not because polite and good form, but because gratitude is the heavenly dew that nourishes the seed of man's divinity. That is the reason that the first call to barbaric men given by a messenger of God was, 'O come, let us give thanks unto God for His good news and His mercy.' The blessings of God are opportunities for thanksgiving. Religiously interpreted, they voice the good pleasure of God that we shall cultivate this gratitude.

"Gratitude for little things, is it possible that anyone should ever forget it? It is easy to do the heroic deed in the presence of the multitude, when their shouts of approval magnify our courage to will and to do. It is hard to sacrifice self for those things that are shorn of human glory. It is easy for a nation to build monuments to its great heroes. It is hard to even remember the more heroic sacrifices in the isolated corners of life—the little deeds falling as constantly as the dripping sands of the hour glass and wears the life away. It is easy to thank God for the providential happenings that save us from some impending calamity. It is hard to remember always that the little things of our daily life are no less providential that make possible a paradise of our little spot on earth. These blessings of God are 'new every morning, fresh every evening.' The great deeds standing out in brilliant colors may be the warp, but the little deeds and little blessings passing so swiftly to and fro make up the woof of our daily lives. To guarantee the enjoyment of the little things has called forth the heroic deeds of the ages.

"If it be barbarous not to be grateful for the great blessings, it surely strikes a higher note of character to be ever grateful for the little things. Can we be thankful for the hard things? On this day, all our thoughts go back through the years and again we gather around the old fireplace. The vacant chairs are occupied once more. We sing the old songs and play the old games and bow our heads once more for the evening blessing. What changes the years have brought! To-day we have reaped in part, at least, the fruitage of those years of toil. And in the catalogue of things for which we now are grateful, how many things are there which we at first did not count as blessings. The tasks, the hardships, the red on the mantle shelf, symbol of the discipline wrought unto us in tears. How grateful are we for those things! Is this not a true parable of God's fatherhood and His discipline? 'Whom the Lord loveth, He chasteneth.' 'We have had fathers of our flesh which coveted us . . . shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits and life?' wrote St. Paul. I cannot interpret your sorrow.

"I am asking you to look with me toward the world of other men. The giddy maiden passes down into the dark valley and when she comes forth upon her brow is the light of womanhood. The youth is bowed to the earth by a burden too great for his years, but by and by he stands forth, the strong character among men. The eternal songs can come forth from our souls that have been wrung in sorrow and these lives that have been reaped in the moulds of hardship emit that fragrance that makes glad the heart of man. If you know your sorrow, if its full fruition was to-day your possession, then would it be not sorrow, but perhaps a joy. I am only asking you to tincture your cup of bitterness with the sweetness of a faith in the eternal God. You remember Longfellow wrote:

"Not enjoyment and not sorrow,
Is our destined end and way;
But to act, that each to-morrow
Finds us farther than to-day."

"The goodness of God is not shown simply in the showers of heaven, and the fruits of the field, the things we desire and the friends we love, but in the empty skies, the barren fields, the things denied and the enemies we make, for these sound the depths of the human soul and reveal its divine possibilities. Herein we not only receive from God, but are led to collaborate with Him, looking to His divine purpose. Herein the veil to a holy place in the kingdom of God is rent and we enter in and commune with the Father. Who of us is large enough to be thankful in spirit for the hard things?

"To be thankful, for larger things is

BUSINESS MEN like a business-like proposition—and it's just as easy to buy clothes on such a basis as to buy anything else. Our clothes proposition is business-like—that's the reason so many business men come here for their clothes.

We always make a definite offer—our goods are just as represented—they look business all the way through, the way business clothes ought to look—no fancy frills or freaks—just solid substantial clothes. That's the kind business men want.

And then our proposition is made in a business way—men with sense expect we are going to make a profit but there's more profit to the buyer than the seller when the goods are all right like ours. Every business man knows this.

A College Professor Who Has Been Called "The Maker of Playwrights."

George Pierce Baker, professor of dramatic literature in Harvard university, is, according to the December American Magazine, the man who has broken the pedantic prejudice against teaching the modern drama. He has brought the university and the theatre together. He founded the course to instruct aspiring dramatists in the technique of the stage and has achieved so much in the way of practical results that he has been called "the maker of playwrights." Following is a brief extract from the article in The American Magazine:

"Among the more advanced of Baker's many students, of those known as 'Baker's dozen,' some have already been heard from beyond college walls. Edward Sheldon, 'OK,' has written 'Salvation Nell,' 'The Nigger,' 'The Rose,' all remarkably successful on the professional stage. Among others, Herman Hagedorn, Jr., '07, whose adaptation, 'The Witch,' was played at the New theatre, New York, has written several acted one-act plays;

David Carb's 'The Things We Create' has been produced on the professional stage; Allan Davis' 'The Promised Land,' proved powerfully effective in Cambridge. In competition for the Craig prize, Miss Florence Lincoln, of Professor Baker's class at Radcliffe, wrote 'The End of the Bridge,' performed very successfully at the Castle Square theatre, Boston, where two other plays of the competition were accepted for performance later. Besides these, a 'Christmas Masque,' by Charlton Andrews, was lately performed by the MacDowell club, in New York. Moreover, a cordial relation toward the professional stage has resulted in bringing to Harvard some of the best artists of the theatre, to speak or to act on various occasions, of which Henry Miller's performance of William Vaughn Moody's play, 'The Faith Healer,' at Sanders theatre, in 1909, was notably important.

"In August, 1910, Professor Baker demonstrated his own constructive spirit as an artist in devising and directing the MacDowell pageant, at Peterborough, N. H., set to music of MacDowell, with results beautiful and lasting in their influence. From his initiative have also resulted the MacDowell scholarship at Harvard for students in dramatic technique, drawing students from distant places to Cambridge; as well as the Craig prize of $500 yearly, for the best play submitted by his students—to be acted by Mr. John Craig's company in Boston (half of the prize money to go to the author, half to the college library for books about the drama). But besides training the growth of dramatic writers, Professor Baker is equipping his students to become efficient dramatic critics, as is evidence by the work of Kenneth McGowan, '11, in the columns of the Boston Transcript."
